L'AMM

1974

GEORGE FOX COLLEGE

North Meridian Street
Newberg, Oregon 97132

PURPOSE

This year "The Friend" (L'Ami) is an attempt to portray the living purpose of George Fox College as it is actually carried out. We on the staff have put ourselves in the position of being the eyes of this body, recording those things which we have seen, and attempting to realistically focus on those actions which have characterized it.

As a body, we must look at ourselves objectively, through God's eyes, being afraid neither of our mistakes nor of our accomplishments. To the extent that this book can help do this is the extent to which we have succeeded.

This book is about you, individually and collectively, and your interaction as a college during the year 73-74. Look at this record well. May it be the occasion for rejoicing, study, and instruction. God promises greater things ahead if we will learn from our past.

DEDICATION

Goes To The George Fox College Family

Dedicate is defined in the dictionary, "To set apart and consecrate to a deity or sacred purpose."

Who in this body should receive such high esteem, there are many. Teachers have given themselves to the cause of helping students to learn, and better themselves. Administrators and staff have worked many hard hours to make the body function. They all are worthy. The students also put forth themselves to build the body we call George Fox College, a Christian establishment. Hours of study, work, and recreation all make up this institution. In light of this we wish to dedicate This L'Ami to the entire college.

BUILDINGS

Pennington Hall

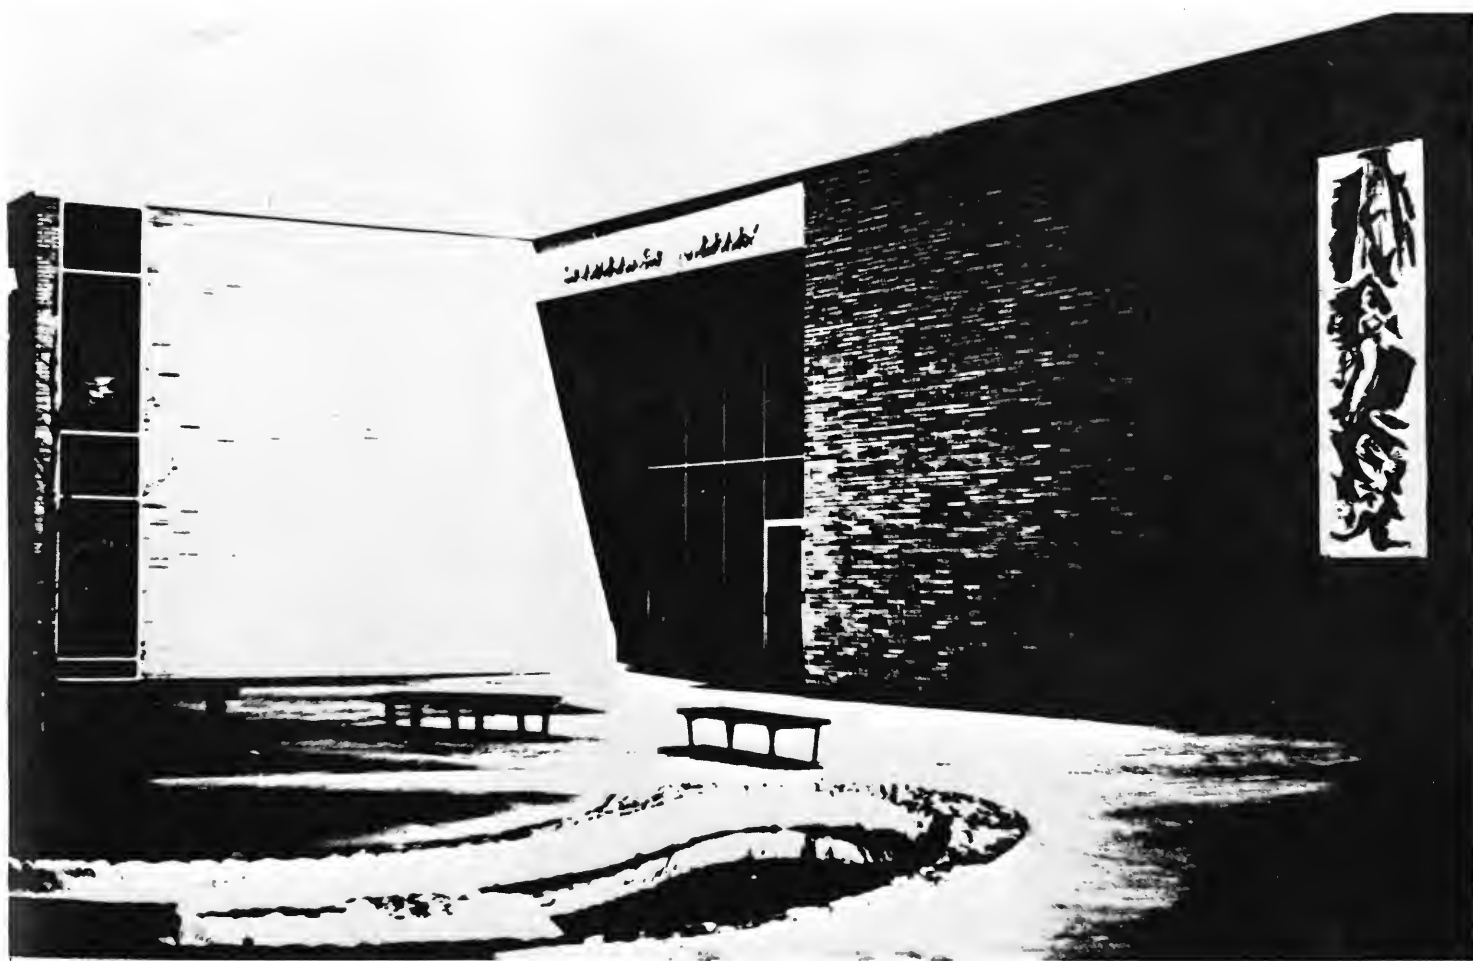

BUILDINGS

They Range From Good To Bad

Our buildings here range from impressive and suitable to neglected and extremely inadequate. Few realize the latter better than the teachers who creatively struggle to operate within these limited and unappealing facilities. A new gymnasium is envisioned in the near future to replace the "firetrap" which presently serves, although P.E. requirements may eventually be dropped which would lighten its present load. The existing art and music facilities unfortunately will remain much the same for the next several years, as will the stage and auditorium. There are, however, a number of beautiful and highly functional buildings. The library, the dormitories, Calder Center, and the student union building are among these. For all that we have, let us be thankful.

A DMINISTRATION

ADMINISTRATION

God's Work Involves Many

The administration here is largely composed of people who maintain that this college is a part of God's work, and small enough for personal relationships on a wide scale. Many work here at something of a financial sacrifice and most are devoting their lives here. The administration carries on most of the strictly "institutional" functions of the college, and for that reason are often appreciated only as people if at all. As students it is important that we know these people on both levels, and that corporate communication occur. This would ease some of the tensions that developed this year and better enable us to work together.

SKY DIVING CLUB

Students Jump Day They Start Training

As a diver hollers "Arch thousand two, thousand . . . seven thousand" he is falling at 32 feet per second, three thousand feet above the ground. Finally his parachute opens and he dangles, suspended over two thousand feet above the ground and floats toward the earth.

Eight students joined the Sky Diving Club this year. This means they have spent four to six hours in training and have jumped at least once. The initial training and first jump cost is around $35; after this the cost is much less. A number of other students have expressed interest in joining.

BLOOD DRIVE

Succeeds As Result Of Willing Participants

More than 80 pints of blood were donated fall term and over 90 winter term. With a speculated 90 more pints for spring term, the year's total donations numbered well over 200 pints.

The drive was operated by the American Red Cross, sponsored by the student body; and held once each term.

This volunteer program enabled people to receive blood who need it without paying prohibitive prices.

RAFT RACE

Mens Rally Wins In 68 Minutes

The 5th annual Willamette River Raft Race was held on a very cold and windy November Saturday afternoon.

Nearly 40 participants attempted the three mile course on eleven assorted makeshift rafts. Some dressed for the occasion in wet suits, while others suffered some exposure, particularly in the two rafts which didn't finish. Due to several mishaps, some rafts spent a longer time in the water than was humorous.

The race was covered by three television networks, one for the first time. They noted especially the regretful "tradition" of dropping garbage from a bridge midway along the course with the intention of hitting the rafts as they passed.

The first raft to finish at Champoege State Park was manned by Tim Hathaway, Larry Henderson, and Mark Thompson, representing the rally squad (men) with a time of 68 minutes, just over last year's record breaking 65 minutes.

DRAMA

Takes On New Light During '73-'74 Season

The drama touring group made a radical change in its presentation this year. The typical performance prior to this had consisted of a traditional "church" play with a broad message.

This year, with the use of improvisations (creative improvising around a set situation, such as three passengers seated together on a jet) they have been able to make pointed observations concerning what they believe to be some of the biggest problems Christians have.

The touring group did not, however, limit itself to church audiences. At the end of performances, the members fielded questions and interacted with the people who watched. This enabled them not only to clarify points of confusion, but to minister further and to be seen as real people.

PEOPLE

Worth Of Each Is Important

Apart from the lives involved in this institution, it is nothing. There are many people within the framework of this college. Their total worth is incalculable.

Are their needs being met, their standards, goals, dreams being challenged. Is anyone rising to the possibilities that God has in his individual situation? Are the people that are here ever going to revolutionize the world? The church? This community? This college? The life of one person?

KAYAK CLUB

Frank And Genevieve Cole Retire After 12 Years Of Service

Frank and Genevieve Cole have served the college for twelve years in a variety of capacities. Frank worked as Dean of Administration and Director of Institutional Research and Genevieve served as Periodical Librarian. Their willingness to help and their faithfulness to the college have been an inspiration to many. The year 1973-74 concluded their service with the college as they faced retirement. The college will remember them as an invaluable asset.

Questions Posed by "J.B."

Archibald MacLeish's "J.B." was presented on campus in February by the Communication Arts department and under the direction of Dr. Michael Graves. In this play a modern Job deals with the existence of evil and suffering from a 20th century perspective. The principal characters are Nickles, who plays Satan (Ken Kinser); Zuss, who plays God (Dan Martin); J.B., a modern businessman who represents Job (Jim Jackson); Sarah, J.B.'s wife (Ann Barbour); Bildad, the Marxist (Rex Carter); Zophar, the Cleric (Roger Sargent); and Eliphaz, the Psychiatrist (Nina Ram).

It is the first time a play of this caliber and posing these questions has been done here. After the play, the cast spent a time of discussion with the audience, opening themselves up to questions about the play and their reasons for doing it. The experience was unusually profitable and stimulating for both audience and case.

TOP: J.B. (Jim Jackson) faces the "comforting" of Bildad, Eliphaz, and Zophar. RIGHT: Sarah (Ann Barbour) helps J.B. to realize a bit of truth about the meaning of life.

"I Pagliacci" Two Plays In One

Directed by Joseph Gilmore and conducted by Dr. Hagen, Leoncavallo's difficult and demanding "I Pagliacci" was performed by the Music Theater three evenings in early April. In Act I, the leader of a traveling troupe of players, Canio (Joseph Gilmore) discovers that his wife, Nedda (Sharon Fodge) has a lover, Silvo (Ron Mulkey), from the town. Act II of the opera is a play within a play, the plot being very similar to that of Act I. Canio breaks out of character and demands the name of Nedda's lover, stabs her, and then stabs Silvio when he comes running at Nedda's call. The other two major parts were Tonio (Burt Rosevear) and Peppe (Tim Hathaway).

'Fiddler on the Roof'

The Music Theater presented the musical, "Fiddler on the Roof" four times in early May. Under the direction of Steve McKinney, Jon Tippin, and Phyllis McKinney, and the conducting of Joseph Gilmore, the cast portrayed life in a small Jewish community in Russia in 1905.

The musical focuses on a poor family of seven: a dairyman, Tevye; his wife, Golde; and their five daughters. Tradition has always played the strongest role in the precarious existence of the Jews, and Tevye sees that tradition begins to break down with the marriages of his three oldest daughters. The first wishes to marry a poor tailor rather than the wealthier butcher her father had made arrangements with. The second tells her father she is going to marry a student revolutionary and asks him to bless them. The third daughter elopes with a non-Jew, an abomination that Tevye can forgive but not accept. The Jews are then asked by the government to leave the community, and the play ends with them scattering to the far corners of the earth.

Students Show Many Talents

Students at George Fox have many and varied talents. These talents might be singing, playing the guitar, playing the piano or just goofing around.

One thing that impresses many people is the willingness of these students to use these talents when they are needed, even if it is just goofing around.

Musical Groups Travel Widely

The George Fox Music Department, throughout the year, has put on over 100 concerts, performances, and recitals combined.

The college has been represented by these groups from Southern California to Alaska, from the West Coast to many parts of Europe.

A new music complex is in the planning. When it arrives it will be a welcome addition for beautifying the college campus. However, the present music facility is very inadequate.

In Memory of ROY DURHAM

The passing of a man like Roy Durham should be honored and rejoiced. Roy was a good man, devoted to God, and cherished by his friends. Roy loved God, his family, friends, and his college; he gave himself generously to all of these.

When a baby is born, if it could talk, it might say, "I don't want to plunge into the world for I am safe and secure where I am." As it is born and grows, however, it finds love, security, friends, new adventures, and many other greater things. When finally advanced in age, that same person might look back on life and say, "I have many friends and deep affections here. Life is too good to leave." But he passes and emerges into a still greater life, which we on earth have little knowledge about.

If we are sad in Roy's death, our sorrow is only for our loss, but for Roy himself it is now far better.

"... to live in Christ, to die is gain." Phillipians 1:21

82 Seniors Graduate May 26

The year 1974 saw 82 students of George Fox College graduate during commencement exercises on May 26. The approximately 1200 people in attendance were especially fortunate to hear an address by David A. Hubbard, president of Fuller Theological Seminary. Mr. Hubbard, also a member of the California State Board of Education, spoke about our responsibilities as Christians "in the midst of a political world." As salt and light of the world, he said, we have an obligation to get involved in government at all levels.

Earlier in the day, D. Elton Trueblood, an eighth generation Quaker, spoke at Baccalaureate. The oldest graduating senior to hear him was Mr. John Chenevert, age 74.
